Emigranter från Bleckstad

Massachusetts

Emigrationen

Från Sverige utvandrade till USA så många personer under slutet av 1800-talet och början av 1900-talet så att Chicago omkring år 1900 var den stad i världen som efter Stockholm hade flesta antal svenskar bland sina invånare, ja ibland kan man till och med läsa att staden hade fler än Stockholm.

Nu för tiden brukar man räkna svenskättlingarna i USA till 4-5 miljoner, frågan är bara vad man menar med svenskättlingar. Faktum är emellertid att utvandringen från Sverige under perioden 1860-1920 var mycket stor.

Orsakerna till att man lämnade Sverige anser man vara:

Att antalet invånare i Sverige ökade, barndödligheten avtog, vaccinationen mot smittkopporna hade en positiv effekt på befolkningsutvecklingen

Att männen önskade slippa ifrån värnplikten

Att man inte kände religiös frihet

Att arvsreglerna lade hinder i vägen för familjens yngsta pojkar och flickor att kunna ta över jordbruket

Att man inte fick ut det man ville av politisk frihet och fackföreningsverksamhet

Att ensamstående kvinnor, med barn, hade en svår situation

Att USA erbjöd mer eller mindre gratis möjlighet att bryta land för jordbruk

Att marknadsföringen av det ”förlovade landet” hade stor effekt på utvandringen från Sverige

Vilken orsaken var för individen är svårt att få reda på utan tillgång till bevarade personliga brev eller andra uppgifter.

För åtskilliga år sedan undersökte jag utvandringen till USA från S:t Laurentii församling och ställde den i relation till antalet utvandrare från hela Sverige. Jag kunde då konstatera att andelen utvandrare Söderköpingsbor var ungefär densamma som andelen utvandrare av hela befolkningen. Vi vet dock att de sämre jordbruksbygderna såsom Småland, Hälsingland m fl hade en betydligt större andel utvandrare än de bättre lottade jordbruksbygderna och att utvandringen från städerna inte var av samma dimension.

Fördelningen av svenskättlingar enligt
Den amerikanska folkräkningen år 2000.¹

Hur förhöll det sig i Bleckstad?

I husförhörslängderna och deras efterföljare församlingsböckerna skrevs det in vart en person flyttade, dvs även flyttningen till Nord-Amerika (Amerika) anges.

Under den undersöka perioden har enbart EN person från Bleckstad utvandrat till Amerika.²

Charlotta Wilhelmina Rockström föddes i Börrum som dotter till smeden Carl Johan Rockström och hans hustru Anna Catharina Persdotter.

Den 24/10 1867 flyttade hon in i Smedstorp i Bleckstad som piga hos sin bror smeden Carl Victor Rockström (född 21/12 1844 i Börrum), som även han flyttade in i Smedstorp vid samma tillfälle.

Carl Wictor kom sedan att flytta till Norrköping 1871 medan smidesverksamheten redan tidigare tagits över av smeden Gustaf Handell.

1880, 1890 och 1900 finns Carl Wictor i Gryt,

Rockström i USA

Vid sökning på internet och med hjälp av mormonernas hemsida Family Search får jag till en början följande träffar i USA:

5 juli 1872 gifte sig en Charlotta W Rockstrom med Otto W Friburg (Friberg). Hennes far anges heta Charles (Carl). Hon är född 1847. De gifte sig i Boston, Suffolk, Massachusetts.

10 augusti 1881 får en Charlotta W Rockstrom en son kallad Walter Valkfrid Friburg. Fadern är Otto W Friburg. Barnet föds i Brockton, Plymouth, Massachusetts. Mannen anges vara skomakare och båda föräldrarna är födda i Sverige.

14 oktober 1885 får en Charlotta W Rockstrom en dotter kallad Eleonora Regina. Fadern är Arthur W Freburg. Barnet föds i Brockton, Plymouth, Massachusetts

3 maj 1895 får en Wilhelmina Rockstrom, gift med Gustav Holmberg, en son kallad Rudolph Oscar Holmberg. Bosatta i Saint Paul, Ramsey, Minnesota

25 maj 1905 får en Charlotta Rockstrom, gift med Ernest Strom (Ernst Ström) ett barn (stillborn = dödfött). Bosatta i Superior, Douglas, Wisconsin

Det rör sig således troligen om 3 tänkbara personer (enligt den här databasen) som kan vara den från Bleckstad utflyttade Charlotta Wilhelmina Rockström. För en av dem anges att hon är född 1847, vilket ju passar väldigt bra in på uppgifterna om henne i Sverige.

History and Incidents in a Hundred Years of Industry

The industry that has made this community known in all quarters of the globe antedates the incorporation of the Town whose history covers the hundred years. The deed by which Massasoit transferred the Duxbury Plantation, out of which territory have been carved the Towns of Bridgewater, and East- and West-, and Brockton, was given for numerous articles, totaling in value about $30. Included were four moose-skins which Myles Standish, one of the signers, may have brought back from his adventures in the wilds, and which would be used for protection of feet as well as for clothing. We have then a starting point in 1649, a reference to that which makes Brockton outrank all other cities, the footgear of the original inhabitants, as well as that of the colonists.

The Log of the Mayflower (Bradford's History) tells us that in 1628 the Plymouth settlers sent Isaac Allerton to England on an important mission, including the purchase of supplies. He thereby probably became the first importer of shoes and leather. But before that day (1623), according to Seth Bryant of Ashmont ("Shoe and Leather Trade of a Hundred Years," 1891), Experience Mitchell, a passenger in the Ann. reached Plymouth. Later he moved to Duxbury, and as one of the earliest settlers in the Plantation came to (East) Bridgewater at a place locally called Joppa. There he established a tannery in 1650. His son. Ensign - later Colonel - Edward, and after him dishing Mitchell, carried on the business for sixty years. So we may account for the fact that when North Bridgewater was incorporated as a Town in 1821, it was already the center of a leather-working people.

Bradford Kingman, in his diverting history of North Bridgewater and Brockton, has an interesting account of men who have risen from the bench of the shoemaker to distinction in other pursuits.

For a later period, and from the City of Brockton, William L. Douglas became (1895) Governor of the Commonwealth

In a business sense, the City's chief end has been and is "feet." Prior to the date which the Celebration recalled (June 15, 1821), shoes were handsewed, then pegged and nailed. Machines were introduced in 1846. Early trade was largely controlled by the village shoemaker in his annual or semi-annual visits to "shoe" the entire family. His "kit" was not so different in 1880 from that of the first Christian era or even earlier. Out of the Revolutionary War came Thomas French of Randolph, a personality figuring in the beginnings of local industry. A tanner and currier, he settled on the Blue Hill Turnpike. Mr. French employed others who had learned the shoe trade in camp or fort, and so began the life which has made Brockton, for he had many apprentices.

From Randolph came Micah Faxon, in the early teens of the nineteenth century, to the North Parish of Bridgewater. In 1811, he carried to Boston on horseback his first hundred pair of fine calf-skin, spring-heeled shoes. They were sold to Monroe & Nash, Long Wharf, for the southern trade. Quick successors and competitors were Silas Packard and Col. Edward Southworth in a store that stood at the corner of Main and Court Streets. In 1820, William French engaged in shoe manufacture. Others early in the business were Zophar Field and Charles Southworth ; John May & Sidney Howard ; Zenas Brett, Benjamin Kingman, Nathan Jones, and Charles & Azra Keith at The Plains (Campaello). Markets were nearby owing to lack of transportation facilities. "The Keiths, the Packards, and the Leaches" have built up the City of Brockton — wrote Seth Bryant, who on his own voucher knew all the shoe dealers since 1800 at least through a period of seventy-one years. According to that authority, more shoes were made in the Second Congressional District than in any other in the United States.

"Brockton is not the home of small plants" (Isaac H. Bailey, article C, Vol. I, "New England States," William T. Davis, Editor). Yet in the beginning this was not true. Little shops in many yards suggested a winter trade to fill the time and supplement the fish and farm of summer. Shoes were "given out" 100 pair at a time to "tit and make" and were kept thirty days to two months. Fitting the upper to the last, with lapstone and hammer, pounding the wet sole, fastening with nails, pegging sole and inner sole together — constituted the major processes. In 1837, North Bridgewater produced 79,000 pairs of boots and 22,300 pairs of shoes and employed 1,125 "hands." Then began the enlargement which today shows thirty thousand workers in sixty factories. George W. Bryant and Daniel S. Howard (1848-1888) were pioneers, as were Charles R. Ford, Martin L. Keith, Enos H. Reynolds, and others. In the early '60's, Peleg S. Leach engaged in business in a shop on the site of the present Police Station and later had large factories on Crescent and West Elm Streets. In 1865, 103,066 pairs of boots and over a million pairs of shoes were made. The increase over 1837 was of course due in a large measure to the sewing-machine. Readiness to adopt new methods and machinery seems to have characterized the town. A. & A. B. Keith were prominent in this respect, as were the Thayers, Samuel Herrod and George Stevens.

In 1870, William L. Douglas came from Plymouth and for some years was foreman for Porter and Southworth. With a capital of $875, he opened a factory for himself in 1876. Preston B. Keith had started five years before and M. A. Packard began manufacturing in 1877. The late George E. Keith commenced his notable career in 1868 in company with William S. Southworth and in 1870 opened a shop on his own behalf. Daniel W. Field entered the employ of D. S. Howard in 1876. And it should be stated, as one recognizes the general amicable relations in so large an industrial center as the Brockton of today, that from the beginning of the Town a very considerable group of manufacturers has either come up from the bench or has had close associations with the mechanical end of the business. The number of cases shipped from Brockton in 1876 was 142,010. In 1919, the value had become by war needs and prices, $146,-378,500. Even in the pre-war year of 1915, it was sixty millions. Now great plants with every modern facility are taking the place of the old-fashioned home-shops. Resourcefulness and versatility, as well as a reputation for reliable goods, have brought this marked development.

When William Cullen Bryant re-visited the community in which he had lived while completing his law studies (pp. 39-43), he wrote: "The whole place resounds, rather rattles, with the machinery of shoeshops, which turn out millions of shoes, not one of which I am told is sold in the place." The last statement would be hardly true today, though the output is even more widely distributed than fifty years ago. The City has developed a great trading center. A writer on the shoe industry raises the question, "Are we nearing the end of the growth which may safely be built on one great industry?" (Seth Bryant.) When one takes into account the commercial importance of Brockton, the problem assumes a different aspect. In addition to the factories for shoes and the thirty or more accessory shops, Brockton has so expanded its life that it ministers largely to a cordon of surrounding towns. Ten banks are further vouchers for thrift.

It has often been observed that in great shoe towns education is above the average. Schools, libraries and neighborhoods so testify. "Peaceful and lawabiding (so Bailey) they live in and for each other." This picture - so far as it described the City, is drawn from two interesting facts : Brockton had an annual No-License record covering a period of thirty years. Further the Community has learned the Better Way of settling disputes. In her industrial life, labor has been carefully studied from many angles. Each side has recognized the point of view of the other. They have seen that through conciliation and arbitration they could as well serve their own ends. This is among the high gifts of Brockton to the country.

A United States Bulletin for 1915 entitled "Boot and Shoe Industry in Massachusetts, a Vocation for Women," has these interesting comments : "Brockton shows civic interest and a degree of prosperity. There is little absenteeism on the part of factory owners whose families have, in some cases, been in the shoe business for a century. The factory draws the immigrant and, if not inefficient, keeps him. Employees own 90% of the homes in Brockton.
